

❖ 2 Hair Restoration Facebook Ads

Facebook Ad Variant 1

As far as honesty is concerned, there's something very wrong with the hair restoration industry.

And it's not like the advertisers in this space are outright lying...

The thing that most hair clinics carefully neglect is that the doctor/surgeon won't be the one performing these hair transplants.

In fact, there are many examples where there's no involvement whatsoever on the doctor's part.

This is even more true in the case of the FUE method of surgery. In many instances, your surgery will be handled by a person with no experience whatsoever on the surgery side of things.

And this begs the question: "Who actually does the work?"

The answer?

Medical assistants who operate on a freelance basis. And the selection process pretty much comes down to who's available on any given day.

If a person is lucky, they might end up with an experienced technician. And if they're not, then that doesn't happen.

And here's the thing:

A huge portion of FUE surgeries in California are performed illegally, as per the standards set by the American Hair Loss Association. And the fact of the matter is the staff lack appropriate qualifications to lead those surgeries.

So, the point to note is that even if a restoration clinic has decent online reviews, there's a good probability that the medical personnel who were responsible for those reviews aren't the ones who are going to oversee your medical operation.

That being said, a lot of people are concerned about the price of hair restoration, and everyone wants to feel like they are getting a good deal. And that's completely understandable.

Do bear in mind that each person has a limited amount of donor hair, and one bad procedure can limit their options later down the road.

The thing to note is that once the donor hair gets used up, your options will begin to run out.

The problem with seeking out cheaper treatment options is that it's more likely that the doctor ignores their duties, and hence the surgeon's personal investment in the quality of results falls.

There are only a countable number of surgeons in the world who can say that they perform 100% of the graft harvesting AND 100% of the implanting of those grafts.

I happen to be one of them.

I'm extremely passionate about my work, and I absolutely insist on performing every hair transplant myself, start to finish.

I also offer free consultations for anyone who'd like to meet me and decide if I'm the right surgeon for them.

Facebook Ad Variant 2

There's something very wrong with the hair restoration industry.

The hair restoration industry has a B-A-D relationship with honesty.

It's not like they're resorting to outright lies.

However, what they leave unsaid is that a doctor/surgeon won't be performing most of the hair transplant operations.

In fact, it's not uncommon for them to have any involvement whatsoever with the entire process.

This holds especially true for the FUE method of surgery.

And this brings the question:

"Who actually does the job?"

The answer— freelance medical assistants who're hired depending on their availability.

In rare instances, the hair transplant operations are done by a team of experienced technicians.

And, the thing to note is that:

A large portion of FUE surgeries in California fail to conform to legal protocols set by the American Hair Loss Association, since the staff running these surgical procedures lack the relevant qualifications for these jobs.

On top of that, hair restoration clinic reviews aren't of much help either. That's because the team that earned those reviews may not be available for a later hair transplant procedure.

Now, what stops many men from seeking hair restoration treatment is the price. Everyone wants to cash in on a good deal.

But do keep in mind that every person has a limited amount of donor hair. A single bad procedure can limit hair treatment options later down the road.

A general rule of thumb you should know is that the cheaper the hair transplant treatment, the more likely that there's no personal involvement of a qualified hair surgeon. This in turn means that the quality of results obtained takes a hit.

Only a handful of surgeons in the world can claim that they perform 100% of the graft harvesting AND 100% of the implanting of those grafts.

I am one of them.

I'm extremely passionate about my work, and I absolutely insist on performing every hair transplant myself, start to finish.

That's not all.

I also offer free consultations for anyone who'd like to meet me and decide if I'm the right surgeon for them.

There are two types of people in the world.

#1. People who think things happen to them

#2. People who make things happen

The first kind is the ones who give away their power. Let their surroundings dictate their life.

The second kind goes on to do big things in life.

They use their strength to face all the challenges life gives them.

Nonetheless...

If you love the outdoors like me, chances are, you love camping.

But from what I've learned, outdoor trips can soon become a nightmare if our car battery breaks down.

Sure, most of us know that it's possible to fix car batteries.

But very few of us know how it works out.

To tackle such situations, having a working knowledge of fixing car batteries comes in handy.

And that's why, to overcome situations like these, it's useful to have some experience fixing car batteries yourself.

The average car battery lasts around 4-6 years.

But there's a catch.

If someone were to refurbish their car batteries, it's possible to make it last for another 5-6 years with proper maintenance.

What's more, reconditioning your car battery isn't hard either.

In fact, you can actually refurbish your car battery with simple household items.

I lay out the entire process in my ultimate guide, "Second Life For Your Car Battery"

Imagine all the extra money you can save over the years.

❖ Balloon Sinuplasty, Hair transplant Ads

According to one study, sinusitis affects more than 37 million Americans each year. Anyone who's suffered from sinusitis will tell you just how unpleasant it can be.

For starters, you wake up first thing in the morning, and you have this terrible headache that makes you second guess if there's a ticking bomb inside your head.s

To make matters worse, sinusitis is also accompanied by a runny nose causing a "stuff"-plugged feeling.

If any of the above resonates with you, then you are likely no stranger to sinusitis, and all the medical baggage that comes along with it.

However, with the progress in medical science, doctors have come up with a solution to significantly reduce, and in some instances eliminate sinus related issues entirely.*

It's called Balloon Sinuplasty, and it's compatible with most health insurance packages. That being said, here's a quick overview of how balloon sinuplasty works.

Balloon Sinuplasty is an outpatient procedure in which a small balloon is inserted with a catheter into the sinus area.

Once inside, the balloon is inflated to open the blocked sinus cavity.

After this, the sinus can be rinsed and suctioned allowing the sinus to completely drain.

The balloon is completely removed and there is no uncomfortable packing left inside the nose at the end of the procedure.

A local anesthetic is used to ensure that the patient experiences minimal discomfort during the procedure.

Just like that, people are getting to resolve their sinus issues for good.

Right now, we are offering free insurance verification for people who are interested in learning whether this life-changing procedure is right for them.

Anyone who's suffered from sinusitis will tell you just how unpleasant it can be. The situation gets even more unbearable when medicines fail to give you relief.

In situations like these, patients who've diagnosed with sinusitis, 🤧 but who're not responding to medications may want to consider sinuplasty. 🏥

New Ad Copy:

“There’s nothing more attractive than an ambitious man.” is a quote that’s popular in our culture.

While the quote has its own merits, it’s kind of contextual...

...I mean is an ambitious man with bald spots, thinning hair, and a receding hairline attractive?

Ask any woman the same question, and most likely the answer you are going to receive is a big fat NO.

The point being...

...the moment a man starts losing hair, his overall attractiveness takes a direct hit. Their confidence levels and overall presentability drop.

Now, many men in a pithy attempt to overcome such scenarios try to cover up with hats.

But eventually most men get tired of wearing hats. What’s more, the ridicule is still there. Even though they're trying to hide their baldness from the world, the ridicule plastered on people’s faces says it all.

Which is why, hair transplantation is a much more effective and elegant solution to dealing with hairloss.

That being said, allow me to introduce myself.

Hi, I'm Dr. Rubinstein

I've helped 1000's of men feel confident about their hair again.

For years, I've helped them to be excited by what they see in the mirror.

I perform a restoration procedure that's:

- Minimally-invasive
- Very Safe
- Permanent
- Virtually pain free
- Natural looking

And it can fill in the thinning areas of hair, and even recreate a natural hairline.*

We've performed literally thousands of these successful hair transplants.

For anyone dealing with hair thinning or a receding hairline,

Please... do number 1 a favor and come see me.

I'd love to chat about hair goals, and discuss the best treatment plan that will restore the hair that was lost.

No obligations. No B.S. sales pressure (nobody likes that)

It pains me to no end when I see friends taking photographs, making memories and having a good time.

But there's this single person who's unable to join in on the fun because they are self-conscious and insecure about the way their nose looks.

And I kind of understand their plight.

Because I am a cosmetologist, who's been actively working in the trenches of nose corrective surgery, I know just how insecure a less-than-average looking nose can make you feel.

It's not just the insecurity.

Nose misalignment can also manifest itself through breathing problems that affect the quality of your life.

But present medical technology makes it possible for us to remodel the nose entirely through corrective nose surgery.

Now, if you are thinking about cosmetic or corrective surgery for your nose, please hear me out.

I am Dr. Ward., and I have been practicing cosmetic surgery on the nose for the past X years.

Having helped thousands of women get rid of their deep-rooted insecurities about their nose, I can say one thing...

If you're considering corrective surgery for your nose, you will want to find a doctor you can rely on...

Imagine moving forward with your nose surgery with an inexperienced nose surgeon only to find out that they have made a total mess out of your face...

...what's worse, you can't really blame them. Because they are still newbies in this field, it's only natural for them to make mistakes.

So, tip number, go with a doctor who's got your back.

Quick tip number 2: Go with a doctor with plenty of experience. It's simply a terrible idea to let a greenhorn do your nose correction surgery — I mean so much could go wrong!

Anyways, if nose corrective surgery is something you are considering, we'd like you to know that we have decades of experience in the field, and we only hire the smartest, brightest specialists. We take our reputation VERY seriously.

Here's what to do next:

Click on the link down below to provide the needed information.

After that, someone from our office will get in contact to schedule an informative consultation (minus the sales pressure.)

During the virtual consultation, we'll discuss goals and I'll be up-front and honest about whether we can help achieve them or not.

In fact, we've had people come see us for the initial consultation who end up thanking us for being honest with them, because they've had bad experiences with other cosmetic doctors who tried too hard to "sell" them a procedure.

After the virtual consultation, patients can go home and consult their significant other, check your finances, etc., and then come back whenever they're ready.

Sounds good? Great, talk soon.

It's what gets me excited to come to work in the morning...

Listen, when considering cosmetic or corrective surgery for the nose, it's important to find a doctor that is trustworthy.

It's also important to go with a doctor that has experience. Don't be someone's first nose-job or facelift!
